Scottish Immigration Law
Practitioners' Association

The three speakers have each practiced and published extensively in this field. Delegates will gain a greater understanding of current caselaw influencing claims for international protection and seeking compensation for victims of trafficking.

Nadine Finch- Barrister, Garden Court Chambers

Nadine is an experienced junior, who practices in the field of public law and civil liberties. Many of her cases involve children and their families in an immigration or community care context. She also represents parties in the family courts where there is an immigration element. In addition she is regularly instructed to provide expert reports in such cases. She also has a special interest in human trafficking and has represented many victims of trafficking over the years. A large number of her cases involve points of law arising from the European Convention on Human Rights and other international human rights instruments.

Faisal Saifee- Barrister, Thomas More Chambers

Faisal Saifee was counsel for the claimants in AT and others v Dulghieru and another [2009] EWHC (QB) 225 where substantial damages were awarded in the High Court to the victims of people trafficking. He is a contributor to Anti-Slavery International's 'A Guide to Legal Remedies for Trafficked Persons in the UK' published in April 2010 and has given seminars on trafficking related issues.

Lorna Drummond- Advocate, Murray Stable

Formerly Assistant Scottish Parliamentary Counsel and Assistant Legal Secretary to the Scottish Law Officers, Lorna was called to the Bar in 1998. She has developed a wide practice in public, planning and commercial law. In 2002 she was appointed Standing Junior to the Home Department and instructed in immigration and human rights cases. In 2007 she was appointed by the Foreign Office as Crown Counsel for a British Overseas Territory dealing with criminal, employment and human rights law.
